FIGHTING MR. TILDEN.

The News and Courier of last Thursday contains an article showing that the nomination of a candidate for the Presidency next year has narrowed down to a selen tion between Tilden, Hancock and Bayard on the Democratic side, and arguing in favor of the selection of the latter. With the conclusions of this article we fully agree, but we cannot endorse the tone of the News and Courie towards Mr. Tilden when it says!

Tilden when it says!

Mr. Tilden cannot be elected because he caunot secure the vote of the Solid South. The argumen: is that the local necessities of the Southern people will impel them to vote for the Democratic candidate, whoever he may be. This is plausible where local needs come into play and the vote for Presidential electors is combined with the vote for State and County officers. It is fatile in South Carolina, where a citizen must cast two votes in different places, if he would give his support to Mr. Tilden. Under the Act of March 22, 1878, there must, at Congressional and Presidential elections, be two ballot boxes for each precinct, which boxes must be kept "separate and apart and not in the same apartment." In one box are deposited the ballots for Congressmen and Presidential Electors, and in the other be x the ballots for State, Circuit and Corenty officers. Now there is as much pu'lle spirit and as much loyalty to the National Democracy in South Carolina as an any other State, but Mr. Tilden is regarded as a chronic sneak and constitutional coward, and neither the mandates of Conventions nor the appeals of the Press will induce the people to put themselves to sny trouble to vote for his Electors. To nominate Mr. Tilden is to throw away the electoral vote of South Carolina, and to lose two or three Congressmen. Can the National Democratic party afford it? Nor is the evil confined to South Carolina. There will be trouble with both Florida and Louisiana, if the candidate be Mr. Tilden.

We do not agree with our contemporary in saying the vote of this State.

We do not agree with our contemporary in saying the vote of this State.

We do not agres with our contemporary in saying the vote of this State cannot be carried for Mr. Tilden, as we believe that South Carolina is a Democratic State, and that her people will vote for the nominee of the party, whoever he may be, knowing that he is sure to be a better man for the country than any man the Republicans will nominate. We believe the same is also true of Louisiana and Florida, for the Southern States cannot afford to permit a Republican success next year. Any thing like the policy indicated by the News and Courier would be worse than suicidal to ourselves. It is nothing more nor less than encouraging Independentism, which 's the hidden snare that is already prepared for the De-mocracy in South Carolina. If our people prize their liberties and the blessings of good government, they must stick together in politics, voting the ticket nominated by their party, and the whole ticket, whether it suits them personally or not. We are now fighting to establish great principles, the success or failure of which decide the final destiny of our Republic. Men are matters of small consequence in such a struggle, and personal in order to compase what would be out likes or dislikes should have absolutely of his reach, if his real principles were likes or dislikes should have absolutely no control over a man's ballot after the nomination has been made. It will not do for a man to say that he will not vote a part of the ticket and still claim to be a sound Democrat, for the discretion which he exercises can be exercised by others as to other parts of the ticket, and by still others as to the whole of the ticket, in each and every of which cases the votor is giving aid and comfort to the enemy. It would present the spectacle of men claiming to be Democrats and yet helping to elect Republicans, as John Kelly and his followers are doing in New York. We have no doubt that we have a plenty of John Kelleys in South Carolina, but we do not believe they will find any con-siderable following. Whatever fight, therefore, we have to make on Mr. 711den should be made inside of the party, and not in such a way as to weaken the Ohio in the Republican ranks. Governor organization or to encourage disaffection and independentism. Our objection to Mr. Tilden is both as to the propriety of his nomination and as to its expediency. We believe it would be unfortunate, because he would be kept explaining and | majorities - so that if the same gain is apologizing during the v ... is canvass, keeping us on the defensive throughout. He is not the strongest man in New race. It is, however, from the disaffec-Jersey, Connecticut or Indiana, and has no more strength, if as much, in New York than Senator Bayard would have. assured before the election. John Kelly We are decidedly in favor of Bayard and has played the political traitor well, and opposed to Tilden, until the nominating convention is over, and then we are in in securing a fair following throughout favor of whoover it nominates. This is, the State, which is enough to insure the we believe, the proper ground for the election of Cornell, it appearances are not South.

TRIAL BY JURY.

The Grand Jury of Fairfield County, present jury system as follows:

We honestly helieve that a new law is now needed. Under the present system one villain upon a jury is equal to eleven honest men, and may in all cases, even of the most fisgrant nature, defeat the ends of justice and run the country to endless expense by making mintrials from term to term. If sixteen jurors were drawn, with twelve to agree, the difficulty might be remedied, and without some change we fear that trial by jury, as at present practiced, although the boasted bulwark of civilization, will be brought into ridicule.

We do not agree with the Fairfield grand jury. It is true that the present jury system possesses those imperfections who are incident to the frailty of all human institutions, but it has been tested for centuries, and the wisdom of man has never been able to improve on I it to die it. There is no use for a better jury law | as likely to be benefited by it as any than we now have, for if the Jury Comthan we now have, for If the Jury Com-other person's, for Ohio was carried on missioners do their duty none but good the bloody-shirt issue, and when it comes men can get upon our juries, except as an accident, and then it is not possible of them to do more than makes mistrial, and of the way. He is the great military of the way. He is the great military which leaves the case for another hearing at the next term. It rarely happens that two mistrials occur, and it is by no means common to have mistrials stall. If there are poor juries the Grand Juries should get after the Jury Commissioners, There kind of evil the Fairfield Grand Jury complains of. We had, therefore, better leave our trial by jury unmolested. () bas served our ancestors well for centuries back, and we should be slow to muse any change in it, except from time to time, to quard its purity and its comretancy, as occasion may auggest.

Deathless Democracy.

Who has forgotton that in 1872 Republicanism swept this city by tens of thousands, the State by one hundred and forty thousand and the country by an immense popular and almost unanimous electoral vote? Hore and there a State gave a nominal majority against Grant, but only six out of thirty-seven failed to east their electoral votes for the Republican candidate. The North was solid for Republicanism by more than half a milition majority, and the party had jolilited and its orators spoke only of victory and of a cloudless future, as they did on Saturday evening. Two years thereafter, the same Republicanism that had been borne into power by a majority that seemed to annihilate all oppositions, was defeated in a majority of the Northern States, defeated in Congress, and the foundation of Republican supremacy in the Sonate destroyed.

dation of Republican supremacy in the Senate destroyed.

In 1875 the Republicans rallied, and by almost superhuman effort, by the exhaustive employment of all the power, and political resources of the government, Ohio was recovered by a nominal majority, Peansylvania was saved by a plurality, only because of the overwhelming majority wrought out in Philadelphia, and all the debatable States of the North trembled in the balance. One year thereafter, when eight and a quaradelphia, and all the debatable States of the North trembled in the balance. One year thereafter, when eight and a quarter millions cast their ballots for President, the Republicans were defeated by a quarter of a million majority of the popular vote. Again in 1877, the tide culminated against Republican power, and Connecticut, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania and Chie were swept into the Democratic column. A year later the Republicans triumphed by bere pluralities in the same States, and new Maine, California, and probably Ohio, are again Republican by bare pluralities, as will be Pennsylvania, New York, and likely Massachusetts, in November. When the elections of 1879 shall be footed up and the enthusiasm that wildly rejoices without regaad to the stubborn facts of arithmetic shall come to a sober investigation of the election figures, who will find the Republican outlook of 1879 and more promisising for 1879 than it was in 1875 for 1876?—Philadelphia Times, Ind.

Senator Bayard has more admirers among the Independent voters of the country than any politician in America. The Springfield Republican, the leading paper in Massachusetts, says of him:

Mr. Bayard was born in a slave-holding State, if we mistake not, he held slaves, he was traveling in the South in the Winter of 1869-61, and with sympathies strongly favoring peace; but as matters stand with Bayard these things would not now injure him, even in Maswould not now injure him. matters stand with Bayard these things would not now injure him, even in Mas-sachusetts. The South will not find many Democratic politicisms at the North advising his nomination, but neither the South nor the Democratic party need nominate a candidate to suit these politinominate a candidate to suit these point-cians. Their votes are secure for any candidates. The need of the party is a man who will raise the standard of Democratic candidates, who will have the confidence of the whole country, and whose nomination will give assurance
